Shooting of W. G. Whitney by J. Y. Christmas-The Former the Son, the Latter the Son-in-Law of Mrs. Myra Clark Gaines-The Coroner's Inquest.

William G. Whitney, aged forty-five and St. Louis land cases, was shot and killed Sat- | Reimer, Philadelphia; F. J. Land, Denver, Col. urday evening by his brother-in-law, James Y. Christmas. The shooting occurred at the boarding-house famous as the Catacazy Mansion, where the Russian Ambassador of that name brought his lovely but notorious bride. It is now occupied as a boarding-house and school by Miss M. J. Harrover. Here Mrs. Myra Clark Gaines had been living with her son and his wife and their three children and her son-in-law, Mr. Christmas, and his three motherless children, The two men had been in the hair-mattress business as partners, but, owing to some disagreements, the partnership was dissolved. Whitney then went into business with H. A. Linger & Co., 1117 Nineteenth street. Christmas was not engaged in any business, but, at the urgent

REQUEST OF MRS. GAINES. who was very foud of her daughter's children, he remained in the house, but recently had made arrangements to go to South Carolina, where he had a farm. Whitney was a drinking man and had a G. Dulany and T. Burke, Virginia; D. B. Sacket, very violent temper, and the differences between | U.S.A. the two men increased in intensity until they be came such bitter enemies that they did not eat at the same table. Besides the business differences between the two men, Whitney became jealous of the attention which Mrs. Gaines showed to Christmas' children, and when he was under the influence of liquor would accuse Christmas of trying is invaluable for Sun Burns.

Takes out inflammation and redness caused by the sun's rays immediately, while the Glycerine renders state of affairs reached a crisis Saturday morning state of affairs reached a crisis Saturday morning by Whitney telling Mrs. Gaines in a threatening manner that the next time he ran across Christmas he would let daylight through him. Christmas was warned of this threat by Mrs. Gaines. At five o'clock, as Christmas was escorting Mrs. Dr. Wheat, a venerable lady, eighty years of age, down stairs to dinner, Whitney entered the front door and saw him going down. He followed him, and, overtaking him about mid way on the staircase, struck him on the back of the neck. A short tussel followed, and then Christmas' broke away and hurried down the stairs. When he reached the foot he turned and fired a pistol at Whitney, the ball taking effect in his heart. He tumbled down to the foot of the stairs dead. Captain Christmas exclaimed: "I've killed him; send for an officer!" He then lit a cigar and went to his room until an officer arrived. The shooting created immense excitement in the house, but Mrs. Wheat was the only witness. The others, however, heard the profane and abusive language of Whitney. Christmas was at once arrested by Officers McGlue and Grant, and removed to the Fifth Precinct Station. He was quite cool and collected, and sent for Mr. W. A. Cook, with whom he had a conference. He claims to have done the shooting in self-defense.

THE CORONER'S INQUEST. An inquest was held yesterday morning at the late residence of the deceased, No. 1336 I street northwest, the following jurymen having been summoned: William Dickson, M. R. Combs, J. L. Kervand, J. J. Knowles, L. C. Stride, and M. R. Foddard. The first witness called was Mr. B. D. Hyam, who testified that last Saturday afternoon. about ten minutes to five o'clock, he was at dinner, when he heard a shrick, and, simultaneously, a shot like one from a boy's pistol. Mr. Christmas' daughter rushed into the room, threw up her arms, and said, "Oh! my father." Witness asked that was the matter with her father, but she made no response: then went to see what was the trouble, and found deceased weltering in blood; at the same time Mr. Hayden came down. I left him and went for a doctor; brought Dr. Hagner, and helped him to search for the wound; found it about two inches from the left nipple. Before I left the house Mr. Christmas approached and said:

Gentlemen, I killed the man in self-defense." Mrs. M. J. Harrover, the keeper of the boardinghouse, testified as follows: "The first I heard of the trouble Mr. Christmas' little son came to a servant and said: 'Come quickly.' The servant was engaged, and I went with the boy. Before we reached the door I heard a report, and looked out and saw Mr. Christmas standing and Mr. Whitney lying on the floor. Only heard the report; did not see the shooting. There was an ill-feeling existing between the two men which had lasted for several months. On one occasion the deceased went to Mr. Christmas' room for the purpose of asjulting him, and was only prevented from doing t by Mr. Christmas being warned by a friend not

Mr. Christmas' son came to me and said Mr. Whitney was after his father. I ran as quickly as possible and when I got within two yards of the parties heard a shot, but did not see the parties, as I was behind a screen." Witness here explained his position and the jury retired to the scene of the homicide in order to ascertain the position of the parties at the time. Upon returning the witness said he knew that on several occasions Mr. Whitney had threatened Mr. Christmas' life; they had not been on speaking terms for a long while. Mr. Whitney fell upon his face, his head just touching the floor and his feet about three steps up; he was on the lower portion of the steps. Did not see Mr. Christmas with a pistol, nor did he hear bim say anything about killing Whitney: never saw either of them have a pistol. Mr. Whitey had no business downstairs, as his dinner was always served upstairs in his room. James Christmas, a son of the accused, was the next witness: "I saw Uncle William coming in the front room, and he said to papa, 'Look here!' I ran to Lewis, the colored boy, and asked him to go with me, and just as I got to the kitchen I heard a

Its Commencement To-Day-The Prepar ations Made and Attractions Offered. The sixteenth annual fest of the Washington Schuetzen Verein will be inaugurated by a grand street parade to-day. The programme covers four days of prize target-shooting for ladies and gentlemen, prize bowling, and the usual dancing and promenade concerts. There will also be special performances each afternoon and evening, embracing exhibitions on the double bar, flying trapeze, and gymnastics by the Columbia Turn Verein. A number of first-class artists have been secured to take part in the above exhibitions. A marked feature of the fest will be the singing of the Washington Sængerbund and Germania Mænnerchor, who have kindly volunteered to assist in the attractions, and will render a choice selection of choruses, quartettes, &c., each day and evening. The decorations along the route of parade to-day in the shape of flags and banners are, in many instances, now in place, and will contribute to give the city a holiday appearance during the continuance of the festival. > THE great and important question with investors at the present day is, how shall we best place our money, have it perfectly safe, and receive the quickest and largest returns? It has been a puzzle with many wealthy people that they have kept their money on deposit in banks and safe deposit companies, receiving a very small return in in-erest. The remark is often made, "When you hear of a real good thing, let us know." Having had occasion to investigate the merits of the New York Guarantee Investment Company, we unhest offered on the market that will for a moment com pure with it for a good investment. Everything about it is open and above-board, and the figures are clear and positive regarding the future pros-pects for paying large dividends.
